2. Read the passage given below and answer the Questions that follow :

Nora : But it would have been fatal for him to know ! Can't you understand that ? He wasn't even to suspect how ill he was. The doctors came to me privately and told me his life was in danger – that nothing could save him but a winter in the south. Do you think I didn't try diplomacy first ? I told him how I longed to have a trip abroad, like other young wives; I wept and prayed; I said he ought to think of my condition, and not to thwart me; and then I hinted that he could borrow money. But then, Christina, he got almost angry. He said I was frivolous, and that it was his duty as a husband not to yield to my whims and fancies – so he called them, very well, thought I, but saved you must be; and then I found the way to do it.

- (i) To whom is Nora talking to ?
- (ii) What was the way to save the life of her husband ?
- (iii) Did husband know the source of money she got for his treatment ?
- (iv) Who was the first to inform Nora about her husband's illness ?
- (v) 'But it would have been fatal for him to know' ! Explain it.
- (vi) Give the meaning of – Yield.

 - (i) When Ishwar Chandra Vidyasagar was working as a professor in the Sanskrit College, Calcutta, his mother sent him word, that he should see her at once in their native village in Midnapur. He immediately applied to the Principal of the College for leave, but Principal did not grant his prayer. Ishwar Chandra, therefore, submitted his letter of resignation stating therein that he considered it a disgrace to continue in service to the distress of his mother's feelings. The college authorities were taken aback and had to climb down. Leave was granted. He set out at noon and walked till evening to reach the bank of Damodar. It was impossible to cross the rain – swollen Damodar at night. When he went to the river-side the following morning he saw that the river had resumed a terrible aspect and the ferryboats had ceased to ply. He offered the boatmen a large reward, but they dared not make the attempt. So he jumped into the river and proceeded to swim across. The men standing on the bank were amazed and exclaimed in one accord that the Brahman was bent upon committing suicide. But protected by his mother's blessings, he fought his way through the mighty waves and reached the other bank in perfect safety.

- (ii) Management is also a resource of production, like other resources of production (land, labour, capital, machineries and enterprise etc.) Land, Capital and Machinery are non-human resources, whereas labour, enterprise and management are human resources. All these resources of production are important, at their own place. But, just as efficient leadership is essential for the success of the objectives of any institution, similarly management is an important active resource, among other sources of production. It is an economic resource, which integrates other resources of production, formulates plans for the future, organizes the institution, directs various activities, establishes co-ordination and also establishes control over all activities. 8. Translate the following passage from English to Hindi :

Siddhartha was the son of the Raja of Kapilvastu, near Nepal. His mother died when he was seven days old. His father brought him up in great luxury and built three palaces for him, one for the winter, one for the summer, and one for the rains. He gave him all the pleasures and games that a young prince could have. He did not want to see the sadness of life. But Siddhartha was a thinker. While he was Quite young, he began to ask difficult questions. In order to fill his mind with other things his father married him to his lovely cousin, Yashodhara. But Siddhartha did not stop thinking. One day, as he was riding out in his chariot, he saw a wrinkled old man. Another day he went out and saw a sick man. Still another day he saw a funeral. He was filled with great pity, and cried out, "Shame, then, on life !"
